RC11 Newsletter is published semi-annually by the Research Committee on Sociology of Aging (RC11) of the International Sociological Association (ISA), and mailed electronically to all RC11 members. Send contributions to esteban.calvo@udp.cl

Article submissions are limited to 1,000 words, will be reviewed by the RC11 officers for possible publication, and may be edited for clarity or space.

Dear colleagues,

Every four years ISA members meet at the World Congress of Sociology. In 2014, thousands of colleges from all over the world will be participating in a World Congress addressing challenges for global sociology. When thinking about these challenges, aging always comes at the top of the list. We already recognize the need for more researchers, practitioners, and policy experts to face the challenges of population aging and turn them into opportunities for better lives and greater development. At the ISA World Congress in Yokohama, we will have a unique opportunity to get more people on board.

Expanding our network will require a lot of effort. However, we have made important progress during the last four years and plans are already underway for a larger and stronger Research Committee on Aging. In this RC11 Newsletter issue, Anne Martin-Mathews and Lucie Vidovicová highlight both our past successes and challenges ahead for a new four-year period in RC11. You will also find excellent contributions by our members, including a book review by Virpi Timonen on Marvin Fomosa and Paul Higgs’ book on social class in later life, a short article by Jacob John Kattakayam on the oldest old in Kerala, and various announcements. As you will see in the following pages, there is a lot to be excited about.

Sincerely,

Esteban
Dear RC 11 Members and Colleagues,

Since our last newsletter, there has been considerable activity in response to the Call for Abstracts for the ISA’s 18th World Congress of Sociology, to be held in Yokohama, Japan, from July 13-19, 2014. In this issue of our Newsletter, you will find the most current information on the preliminary program of sessions on aging scheduled to date for the Congress. RC11 developed a record number of sessions for this Congress, and the response from the community has been nothing less than overwhelming! In all, 270 abstracts were received, with seven sessions receiving 15 or more abstract submissions. The record goes to the RC11 – RC 06 joint session on “Family and Eldercare”, with 31 abstract submissions.

All submissions have now been reviewed by the 2014 Congress RC11 Program Chair, Andreas Hoff (Germany), and the members of the Program Committee: Esteban Calvo (Chile), Koichi Hasegawa (Japan), Jacobus Hoffman (UK and South Africa), Hal Kendig (Australia) and the Program Committee Vice-Chair, Virpi Timonen (Ireland). At this time I thank Andreas, Virpi and the members of the Program Committee for their work in responding to the volume of abstract submissions. It was an especially challenging task to review so many abstracts and to co-ordinate across sessions, in order to accommodate as many presentations as possible. Any further questions about the process should be directed to Andreas Hoff at: A.Hoff@hszg.de. All relevant Congress information is available on the ISA website: http://www.isa-sociology.org/congress2014/

Elsewhere in this Newsletter, you will find information about new members to RC11, and new lifetime members. We welcome new members and look forward to acquainting at future Congresses and other meetings. Many of our lifetime members have had a long association with RC11 and have made great contributions to the sociology of aging. We deeply value their ongoing commitment and engagement.

For many members, the period of ISA (and RC11) membership coincides with the four year cycle between Congresses. Hence, December 2013 marks a point of membership renewal for many of us (me included). I encourage you to not let that deadline slip; as you may know, our allocation of sessions at the World Congresses is a direct function of our membership numbers. We have already benefited from the increased number of sessions we were awarded for the Yokohama Congress, and we do of course wish to maintain that in the future. Membership can be renewed online: http://www.isa-sociology.org/memb_i/index.htm

For those of you looking ahead to future opportunities to engage with RC11 colleagues, I am pleased to report that long-time RC11 member Merril Silverstein of the University of Syracuse, USA, is actively exploring the possibility of a joint RC11- RC06 inter-congress meeting in the spring of 2015 on the topic of ‘aging and families’. More details will be provided as they become available.

The time of the World Congress is also election time for the RC11 Executive (including positions as President, Vice-President, Secretary, Treasurer, Newsletter Editor, and our members-at-large positions). Early in 2014, I will be issuing a Call for Nominations to these Executive positions. At this time, we are considering instituting a mechanism for voting by the full RC11 membership (and not, as in the past, just by those present in the room at the Business Meeting held during the Congress). By February, we will have complete information on the Nomination and election processes. If any of you have questions about the process, or about voting procedures, please do not hesitate to contact me at amm@mail.ubc.ca.

Thank you once again for your interest in the work of RC11. With all good wishes for the holiday season in various parts of the world, and for the New Year.

Anne Martin-Mathieu
Dear Colleagues,

We would like to thank all those new, returning, and current members for their continuous support of the RC11 cause. Between late November 2012 and October 2013 we welcomed a number of new and returning members of RC11:

- New members: Yayoi Shimitzu (Japan), Jun Tsunematsu (Japan), Maria-Jose Torrejon (Canada), Nick Le Feuvre (Switzerland), Bengt Eriksson (Sweden), Ase-Britt Falch (Sweden), Hiromi Watanabe (Japan), Masaaki Yoshihara (Japan), Madhava Jayakumar (India), Haisong Nie (Japan), Tkashi Iguchi (Japan), Kayo Suzuki (Japan), Daiseuk Watanabe (Japan), Yong Jay Lee (Korea), James Odit (Zambia), Shizuko Katagiri (Japan), Slema Kadi (United Kingdom), Marvin Formosa (Malta), Rie Yamanoi (Japan), Johanne Brady (Australia), Pei-Chun Ko (Germany), Marlize Rabe (South Africa), Camila Arza (Argentina), Kiwamu Ando (Japan), Mario Joyo Aguja (Philippines), Lukasz Czarnecki (Mexico), Yuka Matsui (Japan), and Seung-Min Park (Korea).

- Returning members: Cynthia Cready (USA), Neena Chappell (Canada), Laura Merla (Belgium), Susan Feldman (Australia), Wendy Martin (United Kingdom), Verena Haldemann (Canada), Sandra Torres (Sweden), and R. Maruthakutti (India).

At ISA, life membership is available after the age of 65 years. RC11 members recently moving to Life Member status include:

- Victor Marshall (USA), Sara Arber (UK), Elena Bastida-Gonzales (USA), Sally Bould (USA), Hynek Jerabek (Czech Rep.), Shirley Nuss (USA), Mauro Palumbo (Italy), JP Roos (Finland), John Williamson (USA), Carole-Lynne Le Navenec (Canada), and Randi Hjorthol (Norway).

The total number of ISA members in good standing in 2013 is 167. As many of us joined RC11 for four years in connection to the ISA World Congress in Gothenburg in 2010, at the beginning of 2014 only 117 members will be in good standing, so please make sure to renew your membership for both ISA and RC11. It takes only few easy steps following this link: http://www.isa-sociology.org/memb_i/index.htm. The four years membership of RC11 costs as little as $20 USD. In case you are not sure when your RC11 membership will be lapsing, please feel free to contact either directly ISA office or myself at lucie.vidovic@seznam.cz.

Elections to the Wider ISA Executive Committee, Period Fall 2014 to Summer 2018

Year 2014 will not only be the year of our next World Congress and RC11 election year, but also an ISA wider election year. The posts of ISA’s President and Vice-Presidents, as well as positions of the members of ISA’s Executive Committee will be available at this election.

This election will be an occasion to bring our RC11 cause—“the aging”—to the mainstream of social science and to raise awareness to the issues affecting a goal of RC11 is to advance the importance of the sociology of aging within the discipline as a whole. There is virtually no realm of social life which is not affected by profound and global demographic change, yet our voices are still somehow “underrepresented” within many discussions within sociology.

In order to exercise influence we need to be present at the top level of ISA and the up-coming ISA elections provide an opportunity to accomplish that. All RC11 members are encouraged to consider the possibility to nominate or run for some of the positions available. There is no room for false modesty! If you are willing and feeling you have something to contribute to global sociology, please have a look at the ISA website http://www.isasociology.org/about/isa_elections_2014.htm for more details and forms.

The form from the website and a short curriculum vitae should be emailed to isa@isa-sociology.org and sent by regular mail to arrive by January 31, 2014 to ISA Executive Secretary Izabela Barlinska. For full details on the requirements for different roles, as well as on the ISA election process itself please refer also to:
http://www.isa-sociology.org/about/isa_elections_2014.htm
or contact me at lucie.vidovic@seznam.cz, as I am serving as member of the ISA Nominating Committee.

Preparing for a Career in the Sociology of Aging

Session Organizer: Sara ARBER
Session Chair: Anne Martin-Matthews

This session is targeted to trainees and early career researchers in the sociology of aging. A panel of RC11 members (with editorial board experience and experience on research grant making bodies) will make brief presentations on key issues in successful publication and grantscraft in the fields of sociology of aging and in social gerontology. Issues of disciplinary strength and multidisciplinary collaboration are discussed.

RC11 Business Meeting

Session Organizer: Anne MARTIN-MATTHEWS

The RC11 Business meeting will provide opportunity for discussion of programming activities for the Research Committee on Aging for the period 2014-2018. Proposed changes to membership categories and governance structure will be discussed. Voting will take place for the slate of officers for election for 2014-2018. The Business Meeting will be followed by a networking reception for RC11 members.

Calico: Google’s Attempt to Address the Challenge of Aging

On September 18, the tech giant Google added a new initiative to its growing project portfolio: Calico, a medical company that will focus on tackling the process of aging and its associated conditions. Google CEO Larry Page announced this new investment: “Illness and aging affect all our families. With some longer term, moonshot thinking around healthcare and biotechnology, I believe we can improve millions of lives.” As the company is not giving away much information, many commentators have speculated about Calico’s approach to health and well-being. However, Aubrey de Grey, an expert in the field of regenerative medicine said to CNN that “it’s vital to keep in mind that there is essentially no concrete information about [Calico’s] planned direction and emphasis, and any guess that they will take a heavily data-driven approach is no more than a guess.”

Open-Ended Working Group on Aging.

This working group was established by the UN General Assembly by resolution 65/182 on 21 December 2010. It considers the existing international framework of the human rights of older persons and seeks to identify possible gaps and how best to address them. By considering the feasibility of further instruments and measures, the working group aims to develop a comprehensive and integral International Legal Instrument to Promote and Protect the Rights and Dignity of Older Persons. Shirley Nuss, one of RC11 Executive Board Members, suggests that RC11 members may have important research that would serve as valuable input to the formulation of this international instrument.

Old Age Care System Dilemma in the United Kingdom

The UK is facing an old age dilemma with the number of older adults set to soar by a third over the next 25 years. The UK’s Local Government Association and other local government bodies—the Association of Directors of Adult Social Services (ADASS) and the Society of Local Authority Chief Executives (Solace)—have urged ministers to underwrite a national deferred payment scheme to assist people pay for their care costs in old age. As local authorities suggest, a nationwide organization set by the government could lend money which would be paid back from a person’s estate when they die. LGA chairman Sir Merrick Cockell said: “This needs to be part of a huge overhaul of the system that brings care up to a standard fit for the 21st Century and ensures that our increasingly ageing population can lead happy, healthy independent lives long into their old age.” The government’s response to this call is expected around New Year. In the meantime, Care and Support Minister Norman Lamb said: “This is one of a range of proposals we think will make the system fairer—protecting people from unlimited care costs and helping them to pay for care. Our proposals have been part of an open consultation with the public and we will consider all the responses, including this one, carefully.”

Review of Social Class in Later Life: Power, Identity and Lifestyle
Edited by Marvin Formosa and Paul Higgs, Policy Press, Summer 2013

‘Class’ stands proudly centre-stage in the title of this new edited volume from Policy Press. I was delighted to spot the title as I had noted in my own recent research features and indicators of what understood as ‘social class’ playing an important role, but wanted to read more about the concept. The book’s promise to ‘conceptualize the interface between class and later life’ is tantalising.

Marvin Formosa, Paul Higgs and the chapter contributors set out to argue that class relations are an integral part of later life, an argument that has been in recent decades overshadowed by attention to ‘individualised social inequality’ (Beck) as well as by gender, ethnicity and other markers that differentiate experiences of ageing and old age. The editors offer a masterful review of the evanescence of class and the focus on consumption, including taste, fashion and lifestyle that had come to the foreground in gerontological literature as the new bases of divisions and unities among older adults. Some chapters acknowledge the tensions between ‘cultural’ and ‘economic’ approaches to class. The chapter by Wendy Bottero is particularly attuned to the strengths and weaknesses of both approaches, and offers a useful compromise between them. In the light of what I see in my own data, I am inclined to side with the ‘economic’ approach propagated by e.g. Goldthorpe and Crompton in their work. However, this book has convinced me of the merits of the cultural approach, too. The concluding chapter’s call for ‘repositioning social class in terms of individual identity or personal trajectories’ is intriguing but raises questions about the applicability of class as a micro or macro-level concept, and the ensuing challenges for theorising it further. The editors’ invitation to think of class in terms of its ‘moral significance’ also remains somewhat amorphous – but this is not so much a weakness as an indication that there is work to be done and room for new research.

Potential fruitful areas for class-focused substantive analysis are singled out by Chris Phillipson at the end of his chapter.

Formosa and Higgs argue that ‘the individual and collective experiences of growing old, as well as the nature of age relations, differ so significantly by class that there is an urgent need for a unified analysis in which both age and class are taken into account’. Indeed, disparities related to class are arguably increasing, providing further impetus to promoting a new research agenda on class and ageing. Striking and consequential differences in resources available to sub-groups of older people (and their families and wider social networks) have emerged in studies that I have recently undertaken with colleagues in Ireland. This book’s argument that variances in social, cultural and physical capital impact on identities, experiences, opportunities and lifestyles in later life resonates with findings arising from the Changing Generations study recently published in the European Journal of Ageing (Timonen et al. 2013). Reading the excellent chapters by Alexandra Lopes and Wendy Bottero in this book, I now realise that our understanding of ‘class’ on the basis of residential locations (their affluence/deprivation profiles) and occupational classification was perhaps somewhat one-dimensional and even ‘old-fashioned’.

Nonetheless, for pragmatic reasons, academics and students engaged in empirical research are always looking for operationalisations of central concepts in the literature. Social class in later life does not seek to mask the complexity of ‘class’. It is not a research manual and as such it might be somewhat unfair to expect it to offer specific guidelines on how to know what you are looking at is ‘class’, or how to go about finding or generating data on ‘class’ in your research. Nonetheless, a slightly more directive approach in this regard would have been helpful, especially for students considering ‘class’ as a PhD topic or as a significant dimension of their postgraduate research. The characterisation of social class as a ‘condensate of occupation, lifestyle and resources’ does go some way towards flagging a useful approach for the empirically minded though. The potential practice and policy relevance of better understanding of class is also apparent. The chapter by Christina Victor highlights how little we know about care and class, an astonishing fact in view of the need to plan policies that respond to the growing need for care and the differential needs for and capacities to care contoured by class.

Formosa and Higgs have done excellent work as editors. All too frequently, editors take the easy way out by cobbling together perfunctory introductions, often not even bothering to write a concluding chapter; such an approach is partly to blame for the gradual devaluing of books and book chapters. Here, the editors have evidently taken their job seriously and the results are commendable. This book will be of great value to advanced students and researchers alike, and I trust it will stimulate a raft of new theorising and empirical research into class, until recently a ‘zombie category’ – and now set to be transformed into a central concern for all who seek to understand ageing.*

Oldest of the Old in Kerala

Jacob John Kattakayam

Emeritus Professor, Dept. of Sociology, University of Kerala
Director, Centre for Gerontological Studies

In India, the states of Kerala and Punjab have a larger percentage of elderly population compared to other states. Heavy out-migration, high literacy rates, and remarkable achievements in family planning, health, education and sanitation have led to a decrease in birth rate and death rate in Kerala. But the paucity of geriatric institutions, trained personnel, and societal responses have created an alarming situation in a context of rapid ageing. The oldest-old (80-plus) are growing more rapidly than those in 60-69 age-group. The proportion of 80-plus in the elderly population might rise from 11.25% in 1991 to 16% in 2020. People aged 85-plus are now the fastest growing age-group in Kerala. By 2061, older adults could constitute 40% of Kerala’s total population. Of this, 9.1% would be in the 80-plus group. What was formerly a small group of exceptional individuals is rapidly becoming a whole new generation. The increased life expectancy in the state is also leading to four-generation families and increased financial burdens.

Aged parents are often left behind during out-migration. Loneliness is a major issue for these senior citizens, even when living with family. Old-age homes have become common among the elderly in Kerala. Data from the Kerala Ageing Survey of 2009 suggests that Kerala topped the country with 204 old-age homes. One out of every five old-age institutions in India is located in Kerala and they continue to expand rapidly. The poor economic status and illiteracy among the oldest-old population in Kerala coupled with more mental and physical ailments than other age-groups worsens the discrimination and oppression they face. Disrespect, neglect and verbal abuse are the three major forms of abuse faced by the oldest-old segment in Kerala. They are enrolled in old-age homes if their blood relations can afford it; otherwise the oldest-old are ignored, if not abandoned. Instances of the oldest-old being abandoned at public places have been reported statewide and the Kerala Police have begun registering cases against people for neglecting/abandoning their parents.

The Kerala government seems to be waking up to meet this challenge head-on. The primary needs reported by Kerala’s oldest-old include free medicines and health-care, financial aid, pension schemes and separate hospitals. Now old-age homes are being planned exclusively for the 80-plus group. NGOs volunteering to start such initiatives are given subsidies. The government has also recognised the importance of “multi-service community elder care centres” to support the 80-plus. Ideally these centres should be run by senior citizens. The centre’s social workers should visit the families of the oldest-old, where they provide counseling and emotional support, and supplemental care beyond what the family normally provides or is expected to provide to the oldest-old. Similarly, these centers will require trained medical personnel to treat minor ailments. Thus these centres could function as overseers for the cause and care of the oldest-old in Kerala.

Announcements

Call for Papers

Palliative Medicine Special Issue on Palliative Care in Critical Care Settings. Palliative Medicine, a highly ranked, peer reviewed scholarly journal dedicated to improving knowledge and clinical practice in the palliative care of patients with far advanced diseases, announced a new call for papers for a forthcoming special edition about palliative care in critical care settings. This special edition will focus on original research that offers insights into the care of patients nearing the end of their lives in intensive and critical care settings, as the primary focus moves from prolongation of survival to the alleviation of suffering. The deadline for submissions is 30 April 2014. For more information, contact the Editorial Office at debbie.ashby@bristol.ac.uk or visit http://pmj.sagepub.com/.

Meetings

International Conference at AGH University of Science and Technology, January 24, 2014, Kraków, Poland. “Between Work and Retirement. Transition to Retirement in Central and Eastern European Societies.” The focus of this conference is exploring the retirement strategies within Central and Eastern European countries, which are currently undergoing rapid demographic change and grappling with problems arising from population decline, in particular declining birth rates and economic migration. The call for abstracts will be open until November 30, 2013. Proposals may include, but are not limited to, the following topics: Social policy and the intergenerational contract; Strategies for different socio-occupational categories entering retirement; Combining work and family life in the pre-retirement period; Social and cultural practices pursued by “young retirees”; Changes in intergenerational relations within the family and public spaces; Transformations in the identity of individuals in the process of entering late middle age and old age; Old and new media representations and discourses relating to old age and growing old. For more information, contact Łukasz Krzyzowski at lukasz.krzyzowski@agh.edu.pl or visit http://www.wh.agh.edu.pl/conference/retirement/index.php.

International Conference at the University of Algarve, January 24, 2014, University of Algarve, Faro, Portugal. “Care, Health and Well-being: The Views of Older People.” This conference is hosted by the Faculty of Economics and the Centre for Spatial and Organizational Dynamics (CEO). Its aim is to gather professionals, policy makers, students and academics from different areas to discuss health, social care and well-being from the perspectives and experiences of older people. Some of the keynote speakers are Dr. Liz Lloyd (University of Bristol, UK) and Dr. Tom Andrews (University College Cork, Ireland). More information at http://elderviews.info/conference/.

Cartagena de Indias, Colombia. “Unifying the Region.” This event seeks to recognize the efforts that each of the nations of the Americas conducted to standardize the knowledge and be a reference in academic and research issues. Early bird registration deadline: December 31, 2013. More information at http://www.acgg.org.co/congreso/index.html

The 6th Interdisciplinary and Interfaith Conference about Palliative and End of Life Care, April 3-4, 2014, Westchester County, NY, USA. “The Art and Science of Palliative Care: Where Medicine, Market and Meaning Meet.” The Collaborative for Palliative Care convenes this conference that every 18 months brings together over 450 professionals from a variety of settings. The event includes half a day focused on research, and a full day of keynote presentations and workshops. For more information contact Judith Dobrof at jdobrof@cancersupportteam.org or Cornelia Schimert at cschimert@vnahv.org, or visit http://www.cpcwestchester.org/.

8th International Symposium on Cultural Gerontology / 2nd conference of European Network of Aging Studies, April 12-14, 2014, Galway, Ireland. “Meaning and Culture(s): Exploring the Life Course.” The event aims to deepen empirical, theoretical and reflective approaches to the field of cultural gerontology. It will explore ways in which practices and interpretations shape the experience of ageing, making its impacts more or less habitable and offering resources that human beings can shape and change. Equally, it will look at the social processes connected with ageing that promote exclusion and inequality, and the narratives that support or excuse them. The Conference will thus promote discussion of the human ageing process from both interdisciplinary and disciplinary perspectives. For more information contact Christine De Largy at csg@nuigalway.ie or visit http://www.conference.ie/Conferences/index.asp?Conference=213.

International Academy on Nutrition and Aging, July 10 -11, 2014, Alburquerque, New Mexico, USA. “Nutrition and Aging: From Cells to Body Systems and Populations.” This research and practice symposium is an opportunity to discuss the prevention of frailty and loss of function with advancing age, and to present findings on topics that range from basic science cellular response, to body systems and population-based nutritional research. The deadline for abstract submission is January 20, 2014. For more information visit som.unm.edu/cme/2014/IANA.html or contact Kathy Breckenridge, Program Coordinator, 001-505-272-3942, kbreckenridge@salud.unm.edu.

New Zealand Association of Gerontology Conference, September 12-14, 2014, University of Otago, Dunedin, New Zealand. “The Age of Ageing.” The New Zealand Association of Gerontology Conference Committee invites researchers and practitioners to submit abstracts for oral and poster presentation at the event. The conference will promote discussion of the following topics: Living Well with Multiple Chronic Conditions; Cognitive and Social Aspects of Ageing; Health Promotion Communities; Policy and Wellbeing of Older People. Submissions will be accepted until February 24, 2014. More information at http://gerontology.org.nz/.

2014 Aging and Society: An Interdisciplinary Conference, November 7-8, 2014, Manchester, UK. “Diversity and Aging.” This conference seeks to explore the social and cultural diversity in the process of aging, in the topic areas of sexuality, ethnicity, culture, gender and health. The early registration for this event

IAGG’s 8th European Congress, April 23-26, 2015, Dublin, Ireland. “Unlocking the Demographic Dividend.” This event is hosted by the Irish Gerontological Society. It aims to explore the growing awareness that gerontological research can help us to understand the collective and personal benefits that we gain from population ageing. The congress is also an opportunity to learn about the advances in gerontological science which allow overcoming the barriers for realizing the full potential of the Demographic Dividend. Funding

Fund for the Advancement of the Discipline (FAD): Sociology. The American Sociological Association promotes this funding project for competing research initiatives. The goal of these awards is to nurture the development of scientific knowledge through the promotion of innovative research that has the potential for challenging and stimulating the discipline, proposing new lines of research and creating new networks of scientific collaboration. Deadline for the winter cycle is December 15, 2013. More information at http://www.asanet.org/funding/fad.cfm

2014 Dissertation Fellowship Program. The Center for Retirement Research at Boston College announces the 2014 Dissertation Fellowship Program for research on retirement income and policy issues. These fellowships, funded by the U.S. Social Security Administration, support doctoral candidates writing dissertations on retirement income and policy issues. The program is open to scholars in all academic disciplines. Up to two fellowships of $28,000 will be awarded. The deadline for submitting proposals is February 14, 2014. Fellowship recipients will be announced by April 2014. Global AgeWatch Index 2013, http://www.helpage.org/global-agewatch/. The NGO HelpAge International drew data from the United Nations Department of Economic and Social Affairs, the World Bank, World Health Organization, International Labor Organization, UNESCO and the Gallup World Poll, to develop a global index about ageing. The aim of the Index is to capture the multidimensional nature of the quality of life and wellbeing of older people, and to provide a means to measure performance and promote improvements. The website contains interactive tools to compare countries in multiple domains: income, health, employment and education, and enabling environment.*

EduPad Generationes,
Research

Research in the analysis of the dynamics of private and public intergenerational relationships, including international and cultural comparisons, is a popular and important theme in the social and cultural sciences, politics, and practice. For this reason, an understanding of the conceptual foundations – one that takes into account the diversity of languages – is helpful. To this end, the members of the international network GENERATIONES (with support of the Center of Excellency, “Cultural Foundations of Integration” of the University of Constance) have created a multilingual compendium that is also helpful in teaching. It has been composed to make direct comparisons between the German, English, French, Italian and Spanish versions possible and to stimulate the exchange of ideas.

Data

Healthy Aging Data Portfolio. This data portfolio was released by the CDC Healthy Aging Program. It focuses on the health and well-being of older persons in the United States and considers two factors that significantly affect health and the social system: longer adult life span and a dramatic increase in the number of older adults. The portfolio is a compilation of previously published reports that focus on adults aged 50-64 years or ≥ 65 years, depending on the nature of the report. Public health and aging services network professionals, researchers, health-care providers, journalists, decision makers, and others interested in the health of older adults in the USA can use the portfolio to examine data, create reports, and find links to other resources. The data portfolio is available at http://nccd.cdc.gov/dph_aging/default.aspx. For further information, please visit the following website: http://www.cdc.gov/aging.

Data Mapping Project of the Joint Programming Initiative (JPI) “More Years, Better Lives - The Challenges and Opportunities of Demographic Change”. This initiative seeks to map data sources on aging in European countries, searching for gaps in the data infrastructure and informing scientists and policy-makers about available data sources. People

Professor Lars Andersson has been awarded this year’s “Stora Gerontologipriset” (Distinguished Gerontology Award) as an acknowledgment for his many scientific contributions to social gerontology. Professor Andersson’s research has contributed to overturning many myths about older people and aging. He has authored many scientific publications, arranged international conferences, started the first international open-access journal in social gerontology (International Journal of Aging and Later Life), been a driving force in several scientific societies (for example, he was chair of the International Sociological Association’s Research Committee on Aging and Nordisk Gerontologisk Förning) and chair of Swedish Gerontological Society. For several decades, Lars Andersson has contributed to putting studies of older people and aging on the agenda and has thereby been influential in putting Swedish social gerontology on the international map.*

Anne Martin-Matthews received a Distinguished Member Award from the annual conference of the Canadian Association on Gerontology, in October 2013. This award is CAG’s highest honor, and recognizes a member who has made a significant contribution to furthering the objectives of the Association.*

Professor Robert Kastenbaum, passed away on July 24 at the age of 80. He was professor emeritus at Arizona State University in the Hugh Downs School of Human Communication. Professor Kastenbaum was globally recognized for his research on the psychology of aging and death. He wrote the first textbook on the subject, entitled “Death, Society and Human Experience” (1977). He also established the first university-based center on death and dying at Wayne State University in 1996, and founded and served as the first editor for the International Journal of Aging and Human Development and Omega: Journal of Death and Dying. For his contribution to the field of gerontology, he was awarded the Richard A. Kalish Award for Most Innovative Publication from the Gerontological Society of America and the Lawton Award for Distinguished Contributions to Clinical Geropsychology from the American Psychological Association.*

Shirley Nuss, Ph.D., is an Executive Board Member of RC11. Since 2002 she has been conducting research on elder abuse in the rural community to which she returned to assume full responsibility for the care of her elderly parents. In this isolated rural area where health care and elder care remains inadequate, she obtained a unique perspective and commitment to policy-oriented research. She has been has been circulating the following definition of elder abuse to increase awareness of the broad scope of the problem:

Elder abuse can be defined as “a single, or repeated act, or lack of appropriate action, occurring within any relationship where there is an expectation of trust which causes harm or distress to an older person”. The core element to the harm of elder abuse is the “expectation of trust” of the older person toward their abuser. The fundamental common denominator is the use of power and control by one individual to affect the well-being and status of another, older, individual.

While there are a variety of circumstances that count as elder abuse, it does not include general criminal activity against older persons. Elder abuse can take various forms such as physical, psychological or emotional, sexual and financial abuse. In many parts of the world elder abuse occurs with little recognition or response. Evidence is accumulating, however, to indicate that elder abuse is an important public health and societal problem.

Psychological / Emotional Abuse: This form of abuse includes threats or actions directed at an elderly person in an effort to provoke the fear of violence or isolation and which may result in mental anguish, anxiety or depression. Examples of psychological abuse include the intentional use of threat or injury, unreasonable confinement, punishment, verbal intimidation or humiliation, name-calling, insulting, frightening, threatening or isolating, yelling or screaming at the older person, using ridicule or demeaning language toward him/her, etc.

Financial / Material Abuse: Included in this form of abuse is any behavior by another person, without the knowledge and consent of the older person, that results in financial exploitation of the older person through illegal or unethical use of his/her money, property or other assets for personal gain. Other examples of financial/material abuse include theft or conversion of money, personal or other property to the benefit, gain or profit of the perpetrator and loss to the older adult, such as unusual bank account activity or changes in the title to property.

Some causes of elder abuse: Widely held negative attitudes and dehumanizing stereotypes make older persons especially vulnerable to maltreatment of various types.

As a result of the World Assembly on Ageing meeting in Madrid in April 2002, the Madrid International Plan of Action on Ageing (MIPAA), adopted by UN member states in 2002, was developed. The document is based on the United Nations Principles for Older Persons as adopted in 1991. Within the MIPAA elder abuse is specifically addressed as a problem that requires both national and international attention. The document states that in order to work towards a sustainable society for all ages, society as a whole should combat age discrimination and age related violence.

Elder abuse prevents older people from living a life in dignity and fully participating in society, therefore it is an infringement of basic Human Rights. Furthermore, the MIPAA recognizes that ‘older victims of abuse may never fully physically or emotionally recover from trauma. …(O)lder people are especially vulnerable to abuse due to underlying ageism and their higher risk of poverty.

In 2006 the International Network for Prevention of Elder Abuse (INPEA) designated June 15 as World Elder Abuse Awareness Day (WEAAD) and an increasing number of events are held across the globe on this day to raise awareness of elder abuse, and highlight ways to challenge such abuse. In 2011, nearly two hundred countries adopted June 15th as the International Day to Raise Awareness of Elder Abuse. June 15th is the birth date of Anna Marie Koppel Nuss. Make it your International Day! ✡
In December 2013, the Journal of Aging Studies published a special issue on widowhood, honouring the legacy of long-time RC11 member, the late Helena Znaniecka Lopata. The volume was published to coincide with the 10th anniversary Helena Lopata’s death. It was guest-edited by Deborah K. van den Hoonard (Canada), Anne Martin-Matthews (Canada) and Kate Davidson (UK). Several long-time RC11 members have papers in the special issue: Susan Feldman (Australia) on the role of theatre in advancing understanding of widowhood; Sarah Matthews (USA) on historical perspectives on widowhood; and Anne Martin-Matthews (Canada) on ethno-cultural diversity in the experience of widowhood. The special issue also includes the introductory essay: “The Legacy of Helena Znaniecka Lopata in Widowhood Research: Enduring Concepts, Life Lessons, New Insights’, Journal of Aging Studies (2013), http://dx.doi.org/10.1016/j.jaging.2013.06.004.

This book explores the agency of family members in transnational processes of care, in an effort to recognize the transnational family as an increasingly common family form and to question its predominantly negative conceptualizations. By covering a rich array of ethnographic case studies, this volume re-conceptualizes transnational care as a set of activities that circulates between home and host countries - across generations - and fluctuates over the life course, going beyond previous approaches. In August, 2013, this book was nominated “book of the month” by the European Sociological Association.

This book aims to describe the multidimensional nature of cultural beliefs about health and wellness, and how those beliefs and their associated actions affect intervention strategies. By defining and illustrating strategies for culturally sensitive assessment and intervention, the book emphasizes the connection between theory and practice, giving readers the opportunity to practice and evaluate what they are learning.

This book explores the contribution of different scientific traditions to the knowledge of old-age and its context from an interdisciplinary approach. A variety of interpretative frameworks arise from the social representation of old age, all of which express the historical changes of a social construction.

This book offers novel answers to a range of aging issues, from safety and mobility to cognition and continence. Written for the non-technical reader, the book examines the potential of information and communicative technologies such as pervasive computing, smart environments, and robotics to enhance seniors’ quality of life and encourage independent living, better care and self-care, and social participation.

This e-book explores the challenges of ongoing ageing trends and transitions in four Central European countries - the Czech Republic, Hungary, Poland and Slovakia - known as the Visegrad countries. By presenting new research results and better examples, the book tries to fill a gap in knowledge that exists because much of the material on these countries is only available in national languages.
